ART GALLERY

Secondary schools across the country are custodians to some glorious artworks. By Anya Waddington

ASSYRIAN FRIEZE

In the early 1990s Canford School discovered that what they had thought was a plaster copy hanging in the tuck shop was actually a genuine Assyrian masterpiece. It sold at Christie's for over £7m – a windfall that enabled the school to fund many scholarships and bursaries as well as develop theatre facilities and establish a partnership with communities in need overseas. They now display a replica! Canford School, Wimborne, Dorset BH21 3AD canford.com

ANTONY GORMLEY

Looming down from a wall at Eton is Antony Gormley's 'Bronze Edge II'. Gormley's nephew was a pupil at Eton and the sculpture was gifted to the College by Gormley. Eton College, Windsor, Berkshire SL4 6DW etoncollege.com
