

Gresham's School means business

Businesses, training providers and companies offering gap year employment, from East Anglia are being invited to sign up for an inaugural Gresham's Futures Fair to meet with potential employees.

Gresham's Futures, the Careers Department of Gresham's School, is hosting the new event to promote the range of opportunities for work and training available to pupils after they leave school.

It will take place at Gresham's Big School Hall on Wednesday, December 7, from 4.30pm to 7.30pm.

Businesses will have an opportunity to meet with Gresham's pupils and parents as well as pupils from other local schools. The event offers business owners the chance to network with other employers and to raise awareness of the training and employment opportunities that they can offer to school leavers.

Emma Durand, Gresham's Futures Careers Assistant, said: "This is an exciting opportunity for businesses to meet with aspiring young people. Come along and showcase your business, network and share what you can offer to help motivate, inspire and ultimately employ Norfolk's future work force."
