

Business on the breakfast menu

A revamped careers department at Gresham's School in Holt hosted its first ever business breakfast.

The event by Gresham's aimed to provide a forum for Sixth Form pupils to network and engage on a professional level with local business representatives.

It also helped develop their presentation skills and learn more about different career paths.

More local business people, representing many diverse areas including law, architecture, film and video production, engineering, retail, business aviation, counselling and training attended the hour-long event in the school's Auden Theatre.

The business representatives

FOOD FOR THOUGHT: The business breakfast at Gresham's School, Holt.

were joined by Sixth Form pupils who had received networking and face-to-face presentation training prior to the event.

The pupils were confident and keen to speak with business men and women and put their skills to the test over bacon rolls, pastries, coffee and juices.

Visitors were also treated to a musical accompaniment by two of the School's talented pianists, George Jefford and Sam Aldersey-Williams and many also took guided tours of the independent school.

Gresham's Futures hopes to make the business breakfasts a regular feature.