

Chinese dreams for Gresham's head boy

A Gresham's School teenager who spent his childhood travelling around the world hopes to learn about Chinese culture, history and language at Oxford University.

Will Langley, 18, from Edgefield, near Holt, took A-Levels in history, chemistry and economics.

He is hoping to get an A* in history and economics and an A in chemistry to get into Hertford College to read Chinese Studies for four years.

Brunei-born Will has already achieved an A in maths A-Level, which he took over 12 months last year.

■ Will Langley, from Gresham's School, hopes to learn more about China.

He started at the Holt independent school six years ago after attending international schools.

Will, who was head boy, said: "A-Levels were hard work and hopefully that has paid off. I always wanted to do something different. I was always comfortable about learning about different cultures."
