

School snaps up actress Olivia's doodle

The former school of Bafta-winning actress Olivia Colman has bought her charity doodle and plans to put it on show.

Gresham's School, Holt, was the successful bidder in a three-day eBay auction raising money for Epilepsy Action.

The doodle, which had 23 bids, raised £77.

It was among many created by famous people to mark the charity's National Doodle Day.

A school spokesman said: "We thought it would be nice to support the charity and recognise Olivia Colman's contribution."

Her doodle features a bunch of flowers which, she says in a note alongside them, are to say "thank you" to people for raising money.

The spokesman said they would find a suitable place at the school to put it on display.

Ms Colman, who has starred in television series and films including Broadchurch, Twenty Twelve and Peep Show, attended Gresham's between 1990 and 1992. The Norfolk-born actress is also a former pupil of Norwich High School for Girls.

Other doodles were created for the cause by stars including actress Caroline Quentin and comedian Frank Skinner.

A holidaying family whose pet dog bolted after an attack by another dog have thanked a "fantastic community" after an outpouring of help to find him.

Gavin and Emma Harrison's three-year-old dog Eric was attacked on Sunday morning, when the couple and their five children stopped at Brown's Restaurant in Mundford, at the start of a week's holiday.

"I had to kick the other dog to get him off - he probably would have killed Eric."

Mr Harrison said Eric was being held on a lead by his 10-year-old daughter when the attack took place.

"We were going to take our three dogs for a walk in Lynford Forest when we stopped off at the cafe for a break," he said.
